

ISABLAZE WITH COLOR

The City Preparing for the Big Foot-Ball Game Here Thanksgiving Day.

COUNCIL VERY BADLY HURT

Virginia's Star Player Not Likely to be Able to Take Part in the Game.

The city is budding into bunting bouquets of Blue and White and Orange and Blue, the colors of the Universities of North Carolina and Virginia. In anticipation of the great annual foot-ball game of the teams of the two Universities, and even sedate Main Street is germinating into color. Ere the nation's holiday has dawned the city will be ablaze with the bright hues of ribbons, bunting and banners and echoing with the enthusiastic cries of the collegians and their cohorts of sympathizers and enthusiasts. By to-morrow night the gladiators of the gridiron representing the two Universities will be the city's guests, and the hotel lobbies will be thronged with students and alumni, and the sports will delight in such gatherings. Even the quiet sedate citizen catches some of the flamboyant enthusiasm of youth and foot-ball and smiles indulgently, not to say enviously, at the overflowing ardor.

A BATTLE ROYAL.
The great foot-ball rivals of the South, hereditary rivals in the field of athletics and scholarship, will meet in battle royal for the laurel of the white-barred quadrangle here. Known as the gridiron, but now more appropriately called the checkerboard. Both elevens will arrive in the city Wednesday evening in order to get a full night's rest and maintain regular hours of eating and sleeping, as athletics must go in order to be at their best on the morrow. The Virginia team and substitutes will stop at Murphy's in the center of the city's whirl and North Carolina will either stop there or at the Jefferson Hotel, depending on the team will be the coaches Graham Poe of Princeton and Oleott, of Yale the athletic directors and trainers and the physicians.

Next day a splendid train from the University and the hotel will bring down practically the entire student body and many citizens to the aggregate number of about 800 or 900. The same day the Chapel Hill contingent will arrive, several hundred in number, and the grandstand will be filled with thousands from the Old North State, who hope to see the Blue and White triumph. As they came so near to doing last year. Special rates from Wilmington to Richmond and from the Coast Line special trains will leave Raleigh and from Chapel Hill over the Southern and the Seaboard will bring the Carolinians, and hundreds of them. Long special trains from Norfolk, Newport News, Hampton and other points will bring the "Tars" to the game. The James River division of the Chesapeake and Ohio, and regular trains, with reduced rates, from all over Virginia, will bring the followers of the robust sport to Richmond to see the game of the year; the game of many years; for such, indeed, it promises to be. All roads will lead to Richmond and end there for the time being, so far as the destination is concerned. The great majority of the game is concentrated for the gridiron battle on Broad Street Park Thursday afternoon is the magnet that will draw them hither.

A SOCIETY EVENT.
Locally, the game promises to be a society event, for excellence. Beauty and beauty, fashion and its followers among both sexes, will be in hand in its smart frocks and furnishings in the great beauty show that will be seen at the grandstand and in the crowd of bleachers and banded in vehicles or on foot in the field to the north of the gridiron. Everybody will be there, or at least it will seem so, for as the smart crowd of the game is the most brilliant exhibition of scientific foot-ball ever seen here. The stands will be ablaze with color in unconsciously artistic dashes. The girls will wear the color of the teams in their eyes, many of them, and many will wear it in their expressions when they leave a very dark blue, too. The banners of one portion of the crowd will trail delectably; those of the other will flaunt triumphantly over the field in the glare of the autumnal sun.

Such is football, as it is played nowadays.

COUNCIL BADLY HURT

The news that come down from the University of Virginia is very, very blue—as blue as the navy shade of their pants. Council, the great tackle and star ground-gainer, the great tackle and star ground-gainer, and there seems to be some doubt whether he will be in the game and so whether he will stay in until the victory shall perch upon the banners of Virginia. The following special report from the Richmond Times-Dispatch correspondent at Charlottesville, tells its own story:

Council is so badly hurt that he will be unable to play on Thursday. In addition to his injury, which is given as a broken leg, his knees are badly hurt and the tendons and muscles of his legs are so strained that he cannot go up or come down a flight of stairs. His injuries are a sad case of misfortune and there is little chance of his playing. Everybody wants to know if he cannot be gotten in condition for Thursday, but no encouragement is given by the coaches and physicians. It will be remembered that when he tackled the Indian full back, he was practically knocked out and came up very groggy. The extent of his injuries were not known until yesterday when he remarked that he felt a great deal better and he had ever felt in his foot-ball career.

An examination showed that he not overrated the case, but it was this morning before the coaches were told of his condition. What Virginia can do without his services on Thursday it is hard to say. His equal is certainly not in the South, and there are few north of Mason and Dixon's line that can hold their own with him. This report will have a tendency to dampen the ardor of Virginia's adherents, but it does not necessarily mean the loss of the game. It may be that the great plunging tackle will round into shape by Thursday. If not, Virginia will be greatly weakened. But they do not propose to give up the fight. The best substitute they have will go in, and the rest of the team will battle with all the sand there is in them to make up the loss.

CAROLINA CAMP SILENT.
Nothing but silence comes from the Carolina camp—great chunks of silence that smack of strategy and surprise. The team is said to be a heavy one and is made up of veterans of last year, all save two, and are expected to weight and strength to the eleven. With a bunch

"BERRY'S FOR CLOTHES."

A full line of the delicacies of the season. All are "birds" above the average, but not above the reach—the finest Fall fruit from the fashion factories.

Gloves, Neckwear, Handkerchiefs, Hosiery, Canes, Umbrellas—all the accessories to proper every-day, sporting and evening dress, and they are the proper things.

Foot-ball, in fact all outdoor occasions this weather, call for one of our long Kersey or Oxford Overcoats.

A great stock of them here—$10.00 to $40.00. The New Belted Overcoats, $18.00 to $28.00.

We can't stop talking about our Shoes at $3.50. Their equal's not to be had at any other shop. All leather.

of eager substitutes about as good as the regulars, and all anxious to jump into the fray and win for their M. C. monogrammed sweater. Carolina will not lack for supporters. And the team never is deficient in sand—that never-say-die spirit that swept Virginia off her feet last year and nearly converted seeming victory into defeat. Carolina every year manages to bring a team to Virginia that surpasses the University men in endurance, and always finishes stronger than they begin. Though apparently overmatched, they always make a game rally, and are worthy opponents of the best team Virginia ever put in the field. Victory to them over Virginia is sweeter than honey and the honeycomb, and will give them credit in that capacity. The referee has not been announced, but will be a good one, probably Dr. Dashiell or Mr. Richard Armstrong, veterans in the sport.

Tickets will be on sale at Branch R. Allen's, on Main Street, and at J. B. Wood's, Eighth and Broad. Admission, one dollar; including grand stand, one dollar and a half.

Alleged Suspicious Character.

OPPOSE THE KEEPEL BILL

Virginia Delegation in Congress Nearly Unanimously Unfavorable to New Amendment.

SENATE CHAPLAIN ELECTED

Committee Investigating Fitness of General Wood to be Head of Army Will go to Cuba.

The Times-Dispatch Bureau, Colorado Building, Fourteenth and G Sts., N. W., Washington, D. C., Nov. 23, 1903.

The Virginians here are violently opposed to the Keipel bill, now pending in the Legislature, amending the general primary law. The delegation in Congress, although they do not think it proper to be quoted, are nearly unanimously against the proposed change. I have not been able to obtain expressions but those seen were united against it, and I was assured that others were equally as strong.

"I cordially concur in the sentiments expressed by The Times-Dispatch regarding the proposed bill," said one of the leading men in the delegation. "The bill robs the primary law of its chief feature, and the one above all others which commended it to me. It takes away the representation of the minority in the nomination of party candidates."

WORSER THAN CONVENTION.
I am perfectly willing to admit the desirability of conventions where the Democrats can come together and discuss matters of party policy as well as renew old acquaintances, but I do not wish to see this feature restored to Virginia politics at the expense of the primary method of selecting candidates for office. I think the plan proposed by the Keipel bill is worse than the convention method of making nominations.

In conventions there is sometimes opportunity for even pretexts to have a voice in the selection of a candidate, but there is no chance for the strictest possible minority in a county to have such voice under the plan proposed by Senator Keipel's bill. I cannot believe that the Legislature will enact the bill into law."

SENATE CHAPLAIN.
Rev. Forrest J. Frettingham, pastor of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church of this city, was today selected by the Republican caucus of the Senate for the position of chaplain for the extra session. He will not be a candidate for the position at the regular session.

A great deal of the ministerial life of Mr. Frettingham has been spent in Virginia. He was for several years on the Bridgeview circuit, in Rockingham county, and for four years in the early nineties was pastor of the Lexington Church. He completed a four years' pastorate at Staunton in 1900, since which time he has been located in Washington, D. C.

INVESTIGATING WOOD.
There was but a brief session of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs to investigate the record of General Leonard Wood, with a view to deciding whether his nomination to the rank of major-general is warranted. The committee was held in session for several hours, and a subcommittee was organized to investigate the charges made against the doctor-general.

The only witness examined to-day was Captain W. J. Barden, of the artillery, who was under General Wood in Havana. It is understood that Captain Barden was placed on the stand at the request of Senator Foraker, to testify as to the character of General Wood's conduct in Cuba. He was asked to have been valuable so far as the committee was concerned, as he appeared to know nothing concerning the charges made against the doctor-general.

With the understanding that he should continue to-morrow, Mr. Morgan yielded the floor, and Mr. Cullen presented a resolution, which was adopted, providing for the taking of a vote on the Cuban reciprocity bill. The agreement provides that the bill shall be taken up upon the convening of the regular session of Congress, December 7th, and remain in effect until the 15th, on which date a vote shall be taken, the time on the 15th and 16th to be equally divided between the friends and opponents of the bill. The agreement was accepted without dissent. The Senate adjourned until to-morrow.

The messages of his subordinates had been flying over the wire, "As for the President, he said, 'I never sleep on his post of duty or desire, although he sometimes closes his eyes to what is going on about him.' He contended that Colombia was a perfect republic, and he declared that the United States had failed utterly to observe its treaty obligations in guaranteeing the course it had taken. Indeed, he said, our course there had been such that it would bring down the curse of future generations upon us, and he predicted that the immediate result would be disastrous, causing the loss of both men and treasure. The consequence would be such that the President would have to push the course of diplomatic triumphs. He declared his opinion that Mr. Hay had not been a free agent in negotiating either of the canal treaties."

HE WAS STRENUOUS.
Mr. Morgan said the strenuous part of the career of the President had been covered by his effort to secure a canal with Panama and that the President had resolved when the Hay-Herran treaty was conducted after the routine of a canal through and if authority did not exist he had made up his mind to create it.

With the understanding that he should continue to-morrow, Mr. Morgan yielded the floor, and Mr. Cullen presented a resolution, which was adopted, providing for the taking of a vote on the Cuban reciprocity bill. BERLIN, November 23.—Die Morgen Post prints a rumor from Dresden that the Princess Alice, wife of Prince Frederick, disappeared two weeks ago, and that her coachman disappeared at the same time. The people of Dresden, Die Morgen Post says, believe that the Princess and the coachman have eloped. others declined to discuss the matter in specific terms.

"You may say," he stated in effect, "that we are investigating the election as thoroughly as possible and are ready to do so. We have not yet completed our work, however, but will probably do so to-day. We have agreed but until it is in regular order and is presented to the Court, I prefer not to say what it is."

A score or more witnesses were examined yesterday from the list kept secret. One of those summoned was Mr. William H. Sands, attorney for Mr. Brauer, but Mr. Sands is in New York on important business. Another was Mr. H. C. Hechler, one of the candidates. Mr. Hechler was present and was examined. Among those who will appear before the jury to-day is Mr. L. D. Green, the star witness in the Brauer investigation.

The Process.

Violations of the Barksdale law are punishable with a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment in jail not more than twelve months.

The bride wore a short dress, though her age was given as a sixteen-year-old. She was straight as an arrow in a tulle gown sent to the bride's father, saying: "Dear Pop, Mick and me are married. Please forgive us, for I loved him so. We are coming home."
